

FORTY THOUSAND VETERANS IN LINE

GREAT PARADE OF OLD SOLDIERS IN BUFFALO.

President Views the G. A. R.—Stands For Six Hours Bowing Acknowledgment to the Cheers of the Old Soldiers—Special Compliment Paid to War Flags of Illinois

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Forty thousand soldiers of the civil war, more than 12 per cent of the enrollment of the Grand Army of the Republic, passed in review before President McKinley Wednesday. Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Russell A. Alger saw the parade from a private house close to the president's place. Senator Hanna, Archbishop Ireland and Gov. Black shared the president's box. Commander-in-Chief Clarkson stood on the president's left hand and Gov. Black on his right.

President McKinley rode at the head of the parade as far as the reviewing stand, which was at the end of the two-mile march. Two hundred young women scattered along the route, attired in gowns of red, white and blue, scattered flowers before his carriage.

The president rode uncovered the whole length of the parade. He answered every salutation, and gave a spirit to the occasion which will make it the most memorable parade in the history of the army.

When the president, standing on the reviewing stand, caught sight of the tattered war flags of the armies of Illinois he put down his hat and clapped his hands, exploding a demonstration which rolled down the line like the booming of cannon.

The union army never marched under a fairer sky. It rained during the night, but the rain cleared the air, and brought a cool breeze from the lakes; and when the parade started the day was perfect.

Railroad officials say that 300,000 is a low estimate of the number of visitors in Buffalo. Incidents of the parade were plentiful. Nebraska showed the president a banner declaring that in that state sunshine was now being coined. Here and there were pictures of McKinley, with remarks about the advance of prosperity. Perhaps the most beautiful picture that moved past the president was fourteen past commanders of the department of Minnesota, bearing an American flag, 22 by 36 feet. It was stretched from shoulder to shoulder, and the spectators had heaped it with flowers.

When the last man had passed the stand the president was driven back to his hotel. At night he attended a reception at Music Hall, where he shook hands with 5,000 people. He showed no trace of the wearing duties of the day.

The element, which has been fighting for Cincinnati without appearing to fight Col. Mack's candidacy, is now waging war on Col. Mack and the bitterness of it will be carried into the convention. If Col. Mack's friends are in control they will arrange the business of the encampment so that the commander will be elected first. The Cincinnati boomers are trying to defeat this plan and are reorganizing all the elements not allied with Mack on Gen. J. P. S. Gobin of Lebanon, Pa. Pennsylvania has a big representation here, and while Col. Mack has many of the delegates some of them may be won over to Gobin on the question of state pride.

At large delegation of Californians are here to boom San Francisco as the place of holding the next encampment or that of 1899. Should Cincinnati get the encampment for 1898, and everything now points that way, knowing as they do that Philadelphia will ask for it for 1900, the Californians feel that they can capture it for the extreme west for 1899 if ever. There is a possibility of the encampment being given them this year, as Cincinnati has no other opponent in the field and the fight for place and the commander in chiefship may lose the fight for the former to the Buckeye state.

The Ladies' Association of Naval Veterans elected Mrs. Jennie Laird, Providence, R. I., captain commander. The Woman's National Auxiliary to the Union ex-Prisoners' association elected Mrs. R. A. Patterson, Pittsburgh, Pa., national president.

Would Bar Anarchists.

New York, Aug. 26.—Terence V. Powderly, the new commissioner general of immigration, will soon begin a review of the provisions now on the statute books, and subsequently prepare a series of recommendations against the entrance of dangerous socialists or anarchists into the United States. These will be submitted at the next session of congress. Mr. Powderly will favor the enactment of a law to debar the entrance of anarchists, and will make suggestions for a proper definition of the word as applied to immigrants.

Will Operate a Line of Schooners.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 26.—A company has just been organized here called the Copper River Transportation and Mining company. The company will operate a line of schooners between this place and Cook Inlet, Kodiak, the Prince William Sound country and Copper river points in passenger and freight traffic. The first trip north will be made in February.

WORK OF LAWYERS.

American Bar Association in Session at Cleveland, Ohio.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 26.—The American Bar association was called to order at Association hall Wednesday morning with an attendance of nearly 300 delegates. The retiring president, James M. Woolworth of Omaha, was in the chair. President Woolworth in his opening address paid a tribute to Thomas M. Cooley, who was president of the association in 1893-4, and who, "under the weight of great age, has been withdrawn from any further share in the affairs of this world, and he now awaits the summons to another." Regarding the workman he said:

"What this great body of the citizenship, possessed of political power, transported by the enthusiasm of self-sacrifice, directed by a relentless discipline, will be when it becomes thoroughly saturated with these doctrines it is not hard to divine. In that day, if it ever comes, the federations of labor, their battalions enthusiastic, compact, disciplined, organized and moving with one impulse at the word of command, when launched upon institutions under which they suppose themselves trodden down, will sweep from the face of the earth not corporations, syndicates, trusts and aggregated capital only, but all the whole order of industrial society as now organized."

President Woolworth introduced Judge Samuel F. Hunt of Cincinnati, the representative of the State Bar association. The salient feature of his address was that the people must look largely to the lawyers of America for the enthronement of the law.

The evening session was devoted to the reading of reports and discussion thereon. The report of the committee on legal education recommended that the period of study be fixed at three years and that all candidates for admission to law schools shall at least have had a high school education. Judge M. D. Follett of Marietta, Ohio, submitted the report of the committee on international law. It was devoted chiefly to discussion of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty, which it highly commended.

CONFERENCE A FAILURE.

Woodford's Delicate Task—Unfavorable Reports of White and Porter.

London, Aug. 26.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The conference between United States Minister Woodford, Ambassador Porter and Ambassador White has failed to arrive at any definite decision. Gen. Woodford's task is extremely delicate. He has been instructed to put the screw upon Spain, but to avoid any step leading to an open rupture. Much depends, therefore, upon Spain's attitude and upon the amount of support she received in Europe."

"On both these points the reports of Ambassador White and Ambassador Porter were unfavorable to the American case. The Spanish government is forced by public opinion to continue the policy of Canovas, and the sentiment of both France and Germany is decidedly hostile to American interference."

"Under these circumstances it is probable that, until Minister Woodford is able to feel his way more clearly, American policy will be watered down to the maintenance of the claims of American citizens in Cuba, set off by Spain's claims with regard to filibustering."

Czar Thanks His Soldiers.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26.—The czar, zarina and President Faure, with their respective suites, witnessed a march of 50,000 troops at the Krasnoe Selo camp Wednesday. The spectacle was most imposing. As the imperial guard passed the grand stand, the czar cried: "Thank you, my men." At the luncheon which followed President Faure toasted the czar and zarina and the Russian army, to which, he added, he brought the greetings of its French comrades. The czar replied by toasting "Our Comrades of the Valiant French Army."

Fight for Their Union.

Anderson, Ind., Aug. 26.—The American wire mill wire-drawers are on a strike because of the refusal of the company to recognize the union. The company posted a new scale of wages, about 10 per cent reduction, last Saturday, and the men refused to go to work. The scale was revised and the demands of the workers granted. They then demanded that the company recognize the union, which was refused, and the company posted notices for all men desiring their places to report individually Wednesday. Only ten reported. The company employs 700 men.

Indictment for a Doctor.

Greenup, Ill., Aug. 26.—The Cumberland county grand jury found a true bill against Dr. Charles G. Cochran, of Hazeldell, eight miles southeast of Greenup, for the murder of Stella Roberts, 17 years old. Stella Roberts lived with her grandfather, Samuel Black, in Union township. He has given bond of $3,000 for his appearance at the February term of court. He denies the charge.

Meline on the Rise of Wheat.

Paris, Aug. 26.—Premier Meline, addressing the delegates to the council general of the department of the Seine and the municipality of Paris on the rise in the price of wheat, declared that he would submit the question to the cabinet, adding that he would not hesitate to reduce the tariff if the rise was genuine and not speculative.

COAL OPERATORS ARE NOT UNITED

FEAR THAT A GENERAL STRIKE WILL BE ORDERED.

Some Wish to Start Mines—The Small Owners are Generally Willing to Pay All They Ask For, But Larger Shippers Refuse—Strike in Iowa.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—The Pittsburg district coal operators held two sessions Wednesday. In the forenoon they had an exciting talk over breaking the strike. Some of the mine owners, particularly the smaller operators, wanted to pay the 69 cents demanded by the miners' officials, while the large companies, especially those shipping to the lakes, refused to concede from their former position. When the meeting adjourned the following statement was given out:

"Inasmuch as the efforts we have made to bring this strike to an end have failed and that now there is no probability of a settlement on the lines of conciliation and arbitration; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we have no course open but to continue the struggle along the lines that may appear to be the most productive of the results desired in the interests of miner and operator alike."

"Resolved, That we discharge all committees and adjourn sine die."

"J. E. BOYLE,

"Secretary."

There is every indication that the operators have split, and the attempt to start, if made at all, will be confined to individual companies. Some of the operators fear the St. Louis labor conference next Monday will inaugurate a general strike, and they will hold off until after the convention. The operators who want to pay the 69-cent rate pending arbitration will ask the miners' officials to allow their diggers to resume work.

It is rumored the Pittsburg operators who ship coal to the large jobbers in the northwest will make a satisfactory arrangement with their customers by which present contracts will be canceled, and Iowa coal will be substituted where possible. Immense quantities of wood will also be purchased. It is proposed to substitute Iowa coal and northern wood until such time as the miners go to work. This, it is thought, will be before Dec. 1. In the meantime, while the mines are lying idle, the operators will take chances on losing the trade to competing fields.

Supposed anarchists among the striking miners in Tom's Run fired the power-house of the Federal Coal company early Wednesday morning. The building was totally destroyed. It is estimated that the loss to machinery at the power-house, where the power was generated to run the mining machinery, will amount to $4,000.

INDIANA MINERS REASSURED.

Told That They Need Have No Fear of a Compromise Settlement.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 26.—National President Ratchford telegraphs to the officials of the Indiana division of the miners' organization, saying they "need have no fear of a compromise settlement," and to "tell the boys to stand firm."

President Knight has returned to Kentucky to renew the effort to get the men in the Earlinton district to come out. It is known that the operators have procured warrants for his arrest under a Kentucky law, which makes it an offense for a man to ask another to quit work if he is at work under contract. Knight has been notified that a number of able lawyers will volunteer to defend him and test the law, which they say is unconstitutional.

Miners' Strike in Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 26.—The 150 men employed at the Carbondale mine here and who have heretofore appeared to take only a passing interest in the action of the Mine Workers' association, which embraces about 75 per cent of the working force of the coal miners in the district, upon being informed by a committee sent to wait upon the representatives of the company to request an increase in the scale from 70 cents to $1 that the request had been refused, laid down their tools and quit work.

President Dolan Arrested.

Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—Patrick Dolan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, was arrested in Washington county Wednesday afternoon while leading a body of marchers on a public highway past the Allison mine of Cook & Sons, near McJannet station. He was taken to Washington, while the marchers returned to their camp.

Work in Illinois Mines.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 26.—About twenty-five men went to work at the Pawnee mines Wednesday. They were threatened by the striking miners, who tried to camp on the grounds of the Pawnee company. The mine operators appealed to Sheriff Thompson for assistance and protection.

W. R. Holloway Appointed.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The president has appointed William R. Holloway of Indiana to be consul-general at St. Petersburg, Russia, the commission being dated Aug. 21.

GRAVE CRISIS SEEN IN INDIA'S REVOLT

BRITISH STATESMEN ARE FACING A SERIOUS PROBLEM.

Her Power is Threatened—All the Island Empire Will Be Required To Subdue the Rebellion of Indian Subjects—Traders are Very Much Excited.

Bombay, Aug. 26.—The latest dispatches received from the front indicate that the situation on the frontier is getting worse. It is evident that the Indian government must face a grave crisis involving heavy expenditure and probably great loss of life.

The government is confronted with the following state of affairs: Khyber pass has fallen into the hands of the Afridis; the posts in Kurram valley are threatened by the powerful tribe of the Orakzai; the Mohand tribesmen are meditating a renewal of hostilities around Fort Shahbadkar, while thousands of troops are engaged in crushing the revolt in the Swat valley and two large brigades are holding the Tochi valley where the Mahsud-Maziris are again restless.

The authorities are convinced that Fort Ali-Musjid could only have fallen after desperate fighting as the native garrison of Khyber rifles was made up of men who rendered valuable assistance in the Black mountain expedition of 1888.

The fall of the fort is a very serious blow, for it isolates Fort Lundikotal, which is at the extreme end of Khyber pass, garrisoned by 300 Khyber rifles, and necessitates the prompt reconquest of the pass. This is certain to prove a formidable task.

The wildest excitement prevails among the Hindoo traders at Banu on Kurram river. It is rumored that 7,000 Waziris intend to swoop down there, sack the town and massacre the inhabitants. The Mullah and his emissaries, especially those from the Afghan governor of Khost are actively stirring up the Waziris who are also affected by the disloyal attitude of the Kurram tribes and emboldened by the knowledge that the garrison at Banu is very weak.

There is one ground for satisfaction in the fact that except in a few instances the Afridis remain loyal in the face of temptation to join their kinsmen as was conspicuously the case at Fort Maude.

All the British army officers on leave of absence have been ordered to rejoin their regiments immediately.

Opposition to Endowments.

Denver, Col., Aug. 26.—The most important topic at the meeting of the supreme court of the Foresters now in session in this city is that of endowments. The subject has been referred to a special committee. There is strong opposition to the proposed endowment system.

The election of supreme officers took place in the afternoon. Joshua A. Shaw, New York, was chosen chief ranger. A voluntary fund of handsome proportions was raised for the benefit of members of the order now on strike in the coal regions of the east.

British Suzerainty Denied.

Pretoria, Aug. 26.—President Kruger in the Volksraad openly denied the existence of British suzerainty over the Transvaal. "The relations between Great Britain and the Transvaal," he said, "are regulated by the convention of 1884, in which nothing appears bearing precisely upon the question of suzerainty. The Transvaal government is desirous of maintaining the convention in its entirety, but it could not recognize British suzerainty, which is entirely opposed to the convention."

County Treasurers Win.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 26.—Judge O'Rourke, of the Allen county superior court, Wednesday rendered a decision which will be of interest to every county treasurer in Indiana. County Treasurer Hunter sued the commissioners for $1,200, claiming that he was entitled to 25 cents for notifying delinquent taxpayers and 50 cents for each levy made on property for back taxes. The judge rendered a lengthy written opinion in favor of the treasurer, and the commissioners will pay the $1,200 without further delay.

Negro Free Silver League Meets.

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 26.—The first convention of the Negro Interstate Free Silver league is in session here. President Taylor said in his address: "The object of this convention is to perfect our organization. We intend to get together, so that when the campaign opens we shall be ready to act unitedly. All states are to work under one constitution."

Shot Down by Constables.

Covington, Tenn., Aug. 26.—A constable and his assistants in attempting to make a levy yesterday on the household goods of Mike Hill, colored, living at Atoka, a station on the Illinois Central south of here, met with resistance and shot and killed two of Hill's sons and wounded his wife. Hill was not at home, but his wife and two sons were there. As the officers approached the house Hill's wife came out with a shotgun and attempted to shoot the officers, when she was shot by one of the posse. Hill's sons joined in the melee.

LIFE LOST AT RACINE FIRE JUMPED IN THE LAKE TO END HOME WORRY

The $20,000 Plant of Thomas Driver & Sons Was Destroyed Today.

Racine, Aug. 26.—[Special]—The manufacturing plant of Thomas Driver & Sons Co. was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is $20,000 and the insurance $12,000. The Racine Milling Co. adjoining was damaged to the extent of $100. Frank Corrier, a fireman was thrown from a ladder twenty feet high and sustained fatal injuries. His head was cut open.

THE BASEBALL REPORT.

Results of Yesterday's Games Played in the Various Leagues.

Pond, who was easy for the Colts Tuesday, was a Chinese puzzle yesterday, and Anson's men could get but one run. Thornton held the Orioles down to six hits, but these brought in three runs, and won the game. Boston and Louisville broke even, and Washington and New York whitewashed Cincinnati and Cleveland. New York is closing on the Redmen. Every eastern team won yesterday. Scores:

FOR CAMPAIGN OF 1900.

American Party First in Field with Its National Convention.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 26.—The first national convention of the American party, a new political organization, which, as the call issued from Detroit says, will be devoted to the restoration of the spirit and sentiment of the original federal constitution, met Wednesday in Druids' hall, with about fifty delegates present from nine states and one territory. The call had been extended to all "loyal American, non-partisan, thinking men of the nation, upon a platform incorporating the principles of the true American form of government."

The states represented are New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Colorado, Louisiana and Indian Territory. It is stated that a number of other states have signified their willingness to co-operate in the movement.

Two sessions were held, and a permanent organization was effected, with Ellison Stoecker, of Colorado, as chairman, and J. J. Hasselbach, of Detroit, as secretary.

Catholic Foresters Adjourn.

Streator, Ill., Aug. 26.—State court, Catholic Order of Foresters, closed its convention here Wednesday evening. There are now 206 courts in the state, with a membership of 16,975, an increase of 3,031 during the last year. Over $30,000 has been paid in funeral benefits, and the balance on hand is $36,112. Following are the officers elected for the ensuing year: State chief ranger, Thomas McEnerney, Chicago; state vice chief ranger, V. A. Dieter, Naperville; state treasurer, James Burk, Chicago. Aurora was chosen as the place for holding the next convention.

President Borda Falls.

Montevideo, Aug. 26.—During a national fête which was held here Wednesday President J. Idiarte Borda was shot and killed by an assassin. Senor J. Idiarte Borda was elected president of Uruguay for the term extending from March, 1894, to 1898. The fête at which he was assassinated was being held in celebration of the independence of Uruguay, which was achieved on Aug. 25, 1825. The assassin is a youth named Arredondo. President Borda died almost immediately after he was shot.

Royalty to Visit Canada.

London, Aug. 26.—The Echo asserts that the Duke and Duchess of York have accepted the invitation of the premier of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to visit the dominion during the spring of 1898, while on their way to Australia.

SUICIDE OF MRS. MICKELSON, AGED 63 YEARS OLD.

She Had Complained of Household Cares and When She Was Missed a Posse Began Searching For Her—Body Found in the Lake Near Ecnah.

Neenah, Aug. 26.—[Special]—The body of Mrs. Jacob Mickelson, residing in the town of Clayton was found in the lake here, this morning. She had left home yesterday and a posse was searching for her. Mrs. Mickelson leaves a family. She was sixty-three years old, and had complained about home troubles.

Berry Pickers Return.

West Superior, Wis., Aug. 26.—The party of eight that went down the south shore of Lake Superior in a sailboat for the purpose of picking berries and whose prolonged absence has caused much anxiety in this city returned safely Wednesday evening. Rough weather delayed their return, but they suffered no particular hardship.

Will Pay the Scale.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 26.—The Illinois Steel Company formally agreed Wednesday to abide by the new scale of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, and tonight all the departments of the company's works at Bay View resumed operations, with the exception of the puddle mill.

UNION OF ORDERS.

Committees Representing Revolutionary Societies Hold a Meeting.

New York, Aug. 26.—A conference was held at the Fifth Avenue hotel by a committee representing the societies of the Sons of the Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution relating to a union of those two national patriotic orders.

As appointed by the respective national societies the committees were: Sons of the American Revolution, James M. Richardson, Ohio; Samuel E. Gross, Illinois; Nathan Warren of Massachusetts, Gen. George H. Shields of Missouri and E. J. Hill of Connecticut. Mr. Hill was absent and Edwin S. Barrett was present as a proxy. Sons of the Revolution: A. H. Pugh, Ohio; Timothy L. Woodruff, New York; Galliard Hunt of Washington, D. C.; Francis E. Abbott, Massachusetts, and Horace K. Tenney of Illinois.

The conference was animated and the points at issue between the two societies were discussed with keen interest. Both parties exhibited strong desire for a union and a constitution was finally adopted unanimously. It is believed by the joint committees that the plan will meet the general approval of the membership of the two societies. A report is now being prepared setting forth the terms of union for the consideration of the two societies.

BIG DAY AT HOLLAND.

Thousands Gather to Honor the Netherlands Pilgrims.

Holland, Mich., Aug. 27.—The opening of the golden jubilee was a brilliant success, with glorious weather and the greatest crowd that Holland has ever known. It is estimated that 25,000 or 30,000 people were here. They came from everywhere and in every manner. Historical addresses were given by G. J. Diekmann, Holland; Warner Van Norden, former president of the Holland Society of New York, and Professor J. T. Bergen of Hope College. Poems were read by Professor Henry E. Dosker and Captain C. Gardner of the regular army. The addresses were interspersed with music by a chorus of 315 voices under the direction of Professor Wykerk and a band.

NO ARRESTS IN STRUBLE CASE.

Mystery Regarding the Killing of the Cashier Is Not Cleared.

Mount Pleasant, Mich., Aug. 26.—The murder of Elmer Struble, cashier of the Shepherd bank, is as much of a mystery as ever so far as the public is concerned. Detectives are at work on the case, but they have made no arrests. It turns out that the report that Struble made an ante-mortem statement implicating three leading citizens was a fake. Mr. Ryan, president of the bank, whose name was mentioned in this connection has made an affidavit that he was not in the city on the night of the murder. Another of the three was also out of town.

The detectives were engaged all day Wednesday in searching buildings on the street where the bank is located. The authorities are of the opinion that the books are hidden in or near that place.

Bering Commission Meets.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 26.—The Bering commission held a session here Wednesday. In regard to the number of counsel to speak on each side it was decided to arrange the matter at a meeting of representatives. Friday will see the commencement of real work.

Mrs. Wallace Out of Danger.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 26.—Friends of Mrs. Hugh Wallace were greatly gratified to learn that the crisis is passed. Mrs. Wallace's physicians declare she is much better and the danger line is crossed. Her speedy convalescence is now looked for, but she cannot be removed for several weeks.

ROUSED BY FLAMES IN EARLY MORNING

JOSEPH MURTY HAS A VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

He and His Adopted Son Jump
Through a Bed Room Window
With Clouds of Smoke About Them
—Building Almost Entirely Destroyed—
—Loss $1300.

Joseph Murty and his adopted son, Lawrence, had a narrow escape from suffocation early this morning.

Mr. Murty lives at the corner of Center and Pine streets in the Fifth ward. He was awakened shortly after two o'clock by dense smoke which filled the room. Lawrence, who is eleven years old, was bewildered when aroused and ran into another room toward the fire. Mr. Murty followed him and picking the boy up in his arm dropped through the window of the bedroom and then crawled through after him.

Very Little Saved.

Mr. Murty is an invalid and was unable to run, but got to Box 56, three blocks away and turned in an alarm at 2:25. The department responded quickly and they were obliged to take water from the last hydrant at the corner of Palm and Pleasant streets, and only two streams could be used, it requiring 1,400 feet of hose to reach the building. The fire burned slowly but seemed to be in every part of the house and only a few pieces of furniture were saved.

Loss Estimated at $1,300

The upper part of the house was destroyed and about 31,000 will be required to rebuild it. The furniture destroyed is valued at about $300. The insurance will just about cover the loss, there being $1,000 on the building in the Baker & Smith agency and $300 on furniture in the Carter & Haselton agency.

The property belonged to Mrs. Ann Murty, of this city, mother of Joseph Murty. The cause of the fire is unknown, as there had been no light in the house since 6 o'clock last evening, when a gasoline stove was used in getting supper.

MUCH LEAF AROUND AFTON.

Acresage Increased This Year—Crop Goes Under Cover Looking Well.

Tobacco harvest is well under way in this section and in general the crop is a good one. There is a decided increase in the acreage in our town this year, the figures as given by the Edgerton Reporter being 432 acres for 1897, as against 253 acres last year. Who will rise up to affirm that this marked revival in the tobacco industry was not brought about by the election of William McKinley as president of the United States, and the certainty of protection for home industries, as the resultant effect of republican triumph? A largely attended school meeting was held in district number 5, in this town, last Saturday evening, at which the sum of $35 was appropriated for the purchase of a steel pole and a flag, as the necessary adjuncts to a grand "flag-raising," to be held on Saturday, September 11th. What is the Klondike region as compared with the ordinary American wheat field? Mrs. Jessie McNaught and children of Chicago, were the guests of Mrs. Nellie McCreary over Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Eldredge and daughters Alice and Hyla left last Monday for a few days' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blank, at Hebron, Ill. Miss Lois A. Waite is attending the McHenry county fair at Woodstock, Ill., this week. Mrs. Eva Lyman and son Clark of Juda, spent Sunday at J. B. Humphrey's. Remember the week of special meeting at the Baptist church, beginning next Sunday evening. Superintendent Throne conducted a teacher's examination at Milton Junction on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. O. G. Antidel left Tuesday for Plano, Ill., being called thither by the death of his sister, Mrs. Laura M. Fish. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. W. J. Miller. U. G. Waite was the guest of C. H. Gilbert, at Clinton, over Sunday. Excursions to Devil's Lake continue to be popular, two heavily laden trains, going through town last Tuesday. O. D. Antidel, accompanied by his mother and sister, came up from Beloit to spend Sunday with Aunt relatives. W. J. Miller has the foundation completed for an addition to his barn, and now awaits the arrival of the lumber. J. B. Humphrey has a sample vial of Oregon wheat, brought back by one of the Christian Endeavor tourists, and presented to him. Joe is enthusiastic just now over wheat and if he only possessed a few more vials of the dollar cereal, we imagine "Oakwood" farm would look very much like a Dairyville estate next season. Mrs. Eliza Atwood, of Roscoe, Ill., is visiting relatives in this vicinity. Miss Mollie Deitloff came down from Evansville last Wednesday, for a week's sojourn with Aunt relatives. G. O. Sims, of Alexandria, Minn., is spending a few days with relatives in this section. Portions of the Baptist church interior are being repainted and repapered and other improvements are contemplated.

BURGARS' WORK AT FOOTVILLE

House of Stephen Honeysett Ransacked At Night—Clothing Taken.

Footville, Aug. 26.—The residence of Stephen Honeysett was entered by burglars Tuesday night. They did their work unmolested and when they departed took all the wearing apparel they could pack into a good sized satchel. Entrance was obtained through a window of the north-east room and from this room and the closet of the bedroom adjoining most of the missing articles were taken. These were two suits of clothes, a pair of trousers, a heavy overcoat, a leather satchel, besides numerous trinkets. The only money taken was a small amount of change that happened to be in a pocket of one of the garments. Mr. Honeysett and his wife occupy the west bedroom, but until this morning knew nothing of their nocturnal visitors. Burglaries are unusual happenings in the routine of this quiet village, and hereafter windows and doors will be carefully examined nightly.

A very large number of friends and neighbors attended the funeral of George S. Owen at the M. E. church, Tuesday. Rev. John Lugg officiated and the song service was rendered by Mrs. W. H. Cory, Mrs. S. J. Strang, W. M. Ross, Warren Hastings, and Mrs. E. W. Strang as organist. The interment was in the Grove cemetery.

FOUR JAMESVILLE PLAYERS

Oshkosh Ball Nine Includes Morrissey, Crall, Hulloran and Blakely.

Four Jamesville boys who are now members of the Oshkosh ball team, Tom Morrissey, Patrick Holleran and Morris Crall are all playing in the Sawdust City. The Waupun team recently defeated the Oshkosh team by a score of 13 to 1 and the Oshkosh Enterprise in speaking of the game says:

"There was a bad hole at second base, where Jerry played Holleran, a new man, who has been playing in the teams of southern Wisconsin. His work was poor all around yesterday, but of course he should not be judged on one game. Big Tom Morrissey loomed up fine at first and played a strong game. He would be a great addition to the team. Morrissey is an old timer and plays the game right. An old hand like his is what the Colts need. At present there is no one to make a suggestion of any kind. The third new man, Crall, came from Jamesville, and is for that reason a good ball player in the eyes of some. He worked in center yesterday and did nothing to his discredit. Blakely made another one of his fancy catches yesterday. His work in the right garden is as good as this city has ever seen, the season of '87 not excepted. Morrissey made a one hand catch at first that would have set the crowd wild in 1887."

LOCAL WHEELING NOTES.

Mrs. O. L. FIFIELD now rides a bicycle.

Miss DAVIDSON wheeled down from Milton.

ROY SANBORN made a century run last Sunday.

Mrs. O. P. McLEAN is a recruit in the cyclists' rank.

Mrs. STANLEY B. SMITH has purchased a new Badger.

FRANK VANWART will start the races here September 2.

ORION SUTHERLAND of this city has ridden 3,500 miles this summer.

Miss LOUISE SHEARER wheeled to Stoughton yesterday to visit friends.

JAMESVILLE now stands in twelfth place in the L. A. W. state membership list, having a total of thirty-one members.

The cycle race meet to be held here on the afternoon of Sept. 2, is the only event of the kind to be given here this summer.

One or two local aldermen, who say there are 12,000 bicycles in Jamesville, favor a $1 wheel tax, but Mayor Thoroughgood and the majority of the council oppose the idea.

SLIPPERY ELM WAS BEATEN

General Marmaduke Took Him Into Camp—Another Race Later.

Slippery Elm, the running horse, that had such an easy time of it here at the Caledonian games found company that was a little too swift for him at Durand, Ill., last Saturday. W. J. Weinke's horse, Gen. Marmaduke, owned in Belvidere came out winner in an exciting race the stakes being $50 a side. The owner of Slippery Elm was not satisfied and the horses will go again next week for $100 the Beloit man to select the track and Weinke to select the day.

WHEEL TRIP ENDS IN JAIL

Cad Boder Got Too Far From Home to Be Honest.

Sheriff Moulton, of Dane county was in the city this week having in charge Cad Boder a sneak thief who is charged with stealing a watch in Madison and who was captured in Monroe. The watch was found in his possession. He says his home is in Beardstown, Ill., though his parents live in western Kansas. He was taking a bicycle trip for pleasure he says.

WON PRIZES AT GOLF IN A LADIES' MATCH

MRS. J. P. BAKER AND MISS
NORCROSS TIED.

Each Made the Round in 61—Ten
Contestants Turn in Cards All the Scores Being Very Creditable—
Jamesville Players Go to Milwaukee
Saturday.

Mrs. J. P. Baker and Miss Elizabeth Norcross tied for first at place in the ladies' match at the St. Louis Golf club grounds yesterday afternoon. There were ten contestants and creditable scores were made by all the totals being:

Miss Jennie Baker.....64
Mrs. John N. Norcross.....72
Mrs. Charles P. McLean.....70
Miss Elizabeth Norcross.....61
Mrs. J. P. Baker.....61
Miss Nellie Ranous.....74
Miss Mae Stevens.....72
Miss Elizabeth Schlicker.....64
Mrs. H. S. Sloan.....71
Miss Genevieve M. Rich.....65

The scores of the two winners reckoned by holes was as follows:

Mrs. Baker.....7-7-7-6-6-7-7-7-61
Miss Norcross.....4-6-11-7-6-7-6-7-61

The tie was not played off, the first and second prizes, a box of candy given by B. H. Pulker, and two golf balls given by J. P. Baker, being divided. A presentation speech was made under some difficulties by John V. Norcross.

Over fifty crowded about the tables on the club house porch later and enjoyed an excellent supper, with coffee a la Adirondack. It was 9 o'clock before the golfers started for home, an impromptu entertainment being given on a table top, with a bonfire for a footlight.

A team from the St. Louis Golf club will go to Milwaukee on Saturday of this week and meet the Class B players of the Milwaukee Country club. Those who can accompany the team are asked to leave word with J. P. Baker so that excursion rates may be secured.

SHALL ROCK HAVE A FAIR

Secretary George M. McKee Waiting to Hear From Jamesville Merchants.

Secretary George M. McKee is waiting to hear from Jamesville merchants whether there shall be a county fair this fall. Some days ago he sent out notices to the merchants and business men of the city, asking for their opinion as to the advisability of holding a fair this fall and if they would be willing to donate some article to be offered as a premium and if so to state what they would donate and send their reply on a postal card which was furnished by the secretary. The notice stated that the reply should be sent on or before Friday of this week. Secretary McKee has received a number of favorable replies and together with the parties he has seen who have failed to send an answer, the number is about one hundred. Only one of the entire number objected to the plan of holding a fair.

But Secretary McKee cannot base his arrangements on statements of parties, unless they are backed up by the cards, stating what they will donate as the fair depends in a great measure on the prizes offered.

If the answers received up to tomorrow night are sufficiently large to warrant it he will call a meeting of the board of directors on Saturday and determine definitely if a fair is to be held or not.

Farmers are much interested and have agreed to make big stock exhibits if a fair is held.

KLONDIKE IN JAMESVILLE

Presbyterian Church Young People Arrange Digging and Strike Pay Dirt.

Jamesville folk went to Klondike—in imagination. A large crowd was assembled in the parlors of the Presbyterian church last night when a box, commanded by Capt. Chas. Hanson with Rev. E. S. Pence as engineer Thor Hanson as pilot, and with a goodly number of passengers started for the Klondike gold fields. After enduring all the ordinary trials of a long sea voyage—sea sickness, a storm at sea and a wreck—they at last arrived in the land of gold. The Chilcott hotel did a thriving business. It was managed by Fraulein Schultz who having been in the country about six months, had amassed a large amount of gold, which was conspicuously displayed in the form of necklaces, bracelets, lockets, etc. Every one seemed pleased with the entertainment and the committee who planned it rejoice over a financial success.

AN ENJOYABLE MUSICAL.

Miss Agusta Macloon Entertains in Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Adams.

A musicale was given by Miss Agusta Macloon last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Adams. Between twenty and thirty guests enjoyed the singing of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, the accompaniments being by Mrs. Adams' mother, Mrs. J. H. Jones of the state school for blind.

THE TOWN TALES OF A DAY.

Do we get that depot?

R THERE, Mr. Oyster!

FIVE days of summer left.

HARRY ASHCROFT is home from Monroe.

Most folks are home from their vacations.

F. M. MARZLUFF was in Milwaukee this week.

C. F. NILES left today his home in Manominee, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Brand leave next week for an extended trip east.

A. W. HAUMANN is able to be out after a severe attack of rheumatism.

COLD thousands will be digging for cool millions in the Klondike this winter.

PUBLIC schools are being cleaned up for the fast approaching fall sessions.

MERCHANTS who are anxious about the fair should tell Secretary McKee about it.

The last of the Outing club parties will be given Tuesday evening, September 7.

OAK Lawn hospital is grateful to Mrs. Alexander Graham for recently received papers.

J. H. NICHOLSON of this city, will speak before the Y. M. C. A. of Clinton, next Sunday.

Miss EMMA ZAHN has returned from a seven weeks' visit with her parents at Watertown, Wis.

Mrs. EDWARD F. WELCH of Chicago, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Clarence L. Clark, 152 Locust street.

THE season is approaching when the trees begin to display their bare limbs and the corn gets shocked.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Sprague, of Graysville, Wis., are visiting at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Frank A. Paase, 208 North High street.

At the Corn Exchange square last evening the Imperial band rendered an excellent musical program, it being one of a series of open air concerts.

THE advance sale of seats for Louis James in "Spartacus, the Gladiator," will commence at the box office Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Prices 25, 50, 75 and $1.

ROY MCCARTHY, a three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. McCarthy 401 Glenn street, broke his leg between the knee and the hip, while playing with his sister last evening.

Mrs. MARK HONEYSETT entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church yesterday afternoon. The time was very pleasantly spent and tea was served under the trees.

THE Young People's society of the Baptist church will hold a reception in honor of J. F. Judin, the retiring Y. M. C. A. secretary and his wife Friday evening in the church parlors. Mr. and Mrs. Judin leave for Milwaukee their future home next week.

Miss GERTRUDE ZEININGER, who will teach in the Madison High school this year, was offered a very desirable position in the Black River Falls Normal school, yesterday. Professor W. D. Parker came here to renew an offer made a few days earlier by letter. The Madison schools open September 7 however, and Miss Zeininger was unwilling to disappoint the Madison board at so late a day.

More

Medicinal value in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other preparation.

More skill is required, more care taken, more expense incurred in its manufacture.

More It costs the proprietor and the dealer but it costs the consumer less, as he gets more doses for his money.

More curative power is secured by its peculiar combination, proportion and process, which make it peculiar to itself.

More people are employed and more space occupied in its laboratory than any other.

More wonderful cures effected and more testimonials received than by any other.

More sales and more increase year by year are reported by druggists.

More people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla today than any other, and more are taking it today than ever before.

More and STILL MORE reasons might be given why you should take

WHAT ARE DEAD COWS WORTH?

Robert Houston Fixes the Price of Thirty-Six at $5,000.

Rock county farmers are much interested in a test case that has been brought against the state.

Robert S. Houston of Kenosha county, whose herd of thirty-six cattle was condemned by the state veterinarian in November, 1895, has brought suit for $5,000 damages.

The cattle were appraised at $1,710 and the state paid Mr. Houston two-thirds of this amount.

The action is brought in the supreme court, and the complaint alleges that only two of the condemned cattle were killed and that the others were sent to a Chicago fertilizing company.

It further states that in the plaintiff's belief the other animals were sold on the open market after being examined by the United States inspector, who pronounced them free from disease.

He alleges that the state veterinarian did not make a proper test of their condition.

PRAIRIE CHICKENS PLENTY

Local Hunters Stirred By The Stories Brought In By Farmers

The prairie chicken stories brought to town by farmers are putting hue and cry on a wire-dge.

Chickens are very plentiful it is said and are to be seen in places that are well traveled and where it is supposed that they would make themselves scarce.

The season for the shooting of prairie chickens will begin on the 15th of next month, and the deputy game warden of this section has asserted that he is going to enforce the law and see that no hunting of the bird is carried on before that time.

On the Safe Side.

Mr. Slimson—Willie, didn't you go to the trunkmaker's yesterday and tell him to send around the trunk I ordered?

Willie—Yes, sir.

Mr. Slimson—Well, here is the trunk, but no strap. Didn't he say anything about the strap?

Willie—Yes, sir; but I told him I guessed you hadn't better have any strap.—Demorest's Magazine.

Couldn't Understand.

"Yes," said Penwise, "my literary productions are being widely copied by the big papers throughout the country, but there's one thing about it that perplexes me."

"What's that?" asked the religious reporter.

"They always put my serious poems in the joke column. How do you suppose that happens?"—Cleveland Leader.

He Couldn't Furnish It.

"Yes," he said, with some show of temper, "he said, with some show of temper, 'you're just the kind of a woman to spend $10,000 a year on dress alone.'"

"Oh, no, I'm not," she replied, sweetly. "If I were, I would have married a different kind of a man."

And the more he thought of it the more satisfied he became that it was a hot one.—Chicago Post.

An Advantage.

"I envy her her complexion," said Maud.

"But she freckles and tans so easily!" replied Mamie.

"That's just it. She can go to the seashore for a few days at the end of the season and look exactly as if she had been away all summer."—Washington Star.

Not Robbed.

Actress (who thinks of having her diamonds stolen for the sake of the advertisement)—Has any one ever been robbed at this hotel?

Guest (summer hotel)—None of my friends have. We all took the precaution to settle about rates before we came.—N. Y. Weekly.

An Ethical Boon.

"The bicycle is a great moral factor," exclaimed the enthusiastic Mr. Sprockett. "It keeps women from gossiping about their neighbors."

"Pooh!" was Mr. Teaser's interruption. "From my observation, it helps them to run people down more than ever."—N. Y. Journal.

1884—Celia Loughton Thaxter, American poet, died at the Isles of Shoals; born 1835.

NO PEACE FOR CUBA.
The Cuban rebellion has gone on merrily during the last few weeks although the wheat market has kept the United States from paying much attention to war news. It has been two years and a half since the present uprising in Cuba began, and the Spanish captain-general who promised to end the trouble in ten days finds himself still on the defensive.

A most rigorous policy backed by overpowering force has seemed unavailing in checking the Cuban forces. While the Spanish army has reached an aggregate of 250,000 the insurgents have never at one time had more than 25,000 armed men in the field. They have no fixed base of supplies, no towns or forts to hold, and they concentrate or scatter according to circumstances of the moment. By avoiding pitched battles they escape with comparatively small losses, and yet are ready to strike unexpectedly at exposed points. Cuba's natural fertility is such that the native soldiers manage to subsist without a regular commissary department. These are advantages Weyler has not overcome in his military campaigns, and during the last year his main reliance has been a policy of extreme cruelty. That, as the world knows has been no more effective. Insurgent leaders, like Marti and Maceo, have fallen without accomplishing the purpose of the Cubans to throw off the foreign yoke.

It is estimated that since the beginning of the war 10,000 armed Cubans and 50,000 non-combatants have been killed or have died from disease or starvation. The Spanish report their loss at 45,000 by bullets and disease, but it is stated by another authority that at least 40,000 Spanish soldiers have died from yellow fever, smallpox and other maladies. Many thousands have been sent back to Spain as invalids. The war has cost Spain $200,000,000 and the drain now is $11,000,000 a month. Tobacco and sugar production is four-fifths suspended an aggregate annual loss of $68,000,000. Commerce between Cuba and the United States has suffered to a similar extent. Since 1868, a period of twenty nine years, Cuba has been in revolt over twelve years. In the present rebellion more non-combatants have been killed than in any three modern wars elsewhere. Weyler's latest effort to push on through the rainy season has apparently been one of his worst mistakes. His recall is probable but in any case the insurrection is at least as formidable as it has ever been.

Congressman Cooper has recommended the appointment of Chalmers Ingersoll as postmaster of Beloit. The news of the appointment will be received with general satisfaction. Mr. Ingersoll's efficiency having been proved, and his valuable services in the interest of the republican party entitling him to recognition.

SWEPT OVER FALLS TO INSTANT DEATH

DETAILS OF WARREN BUSH'S FATE RECEIVED

He and Two Companions Were Fishing on the Canadian Side and Their Boat Worked Down Too Near the Falls—Bodies Have Not Yet Been Recovered.

It was Warren Bush, formerly of Janesville, who was swept over Niagara Falls last week.

Frank Weber, who was drowned with him, was also a former resident of Janesville, his father having been a member of the Janesville Carriage Co. Mrs. Bush is now in Clarenceville, Ontario, where Geo. D. Simpson and mother are spending a few days. A newspaper clipping sent to the Gazette by Mr. Simpson gives Weber's age as 40, Bush's as 31 and Charles Glasner's as 20. The three started out on the river in a small boat in the afternoon to go fishing and that was the last seen of the men by their companions in camp.

Story of an Eye-Witness

Many people saw the little boat and its occupants enter the rapids and the news of the catastrophe soon flashed from mouth to mouth. A very clear and doubtless accurate account of the affair was told by R. T. McNaughton of Jackson, Mich., who came to the falls on a pleasure trip. Mr. McNaughton with a companion, was sitting at the head of the Dufferin Islands on the Canadian side about 5:20 o'clock, when a small sail boat that was maneuvering about on the river in dangerous proximity to the line of white breakers that marked the beginning of the Canadian rapids, attracted their attention. The boat continued to tack back and forth, and although Mr. McNaughton did not fully comprehend the treacherous nature of the river at that point he and his companion realized that the boat and its occupants were in imminent danger. Suddenly the sail was dropped and a moment later the boat had struck the line of breakers.

The Fight For Life.

The first wave turned the boat bottom-side up and the startled watchers saw the men floundering in the water. One of them struck out for the shore and had reached within 50 feet of it, when an undertown dragged him down and he appeared no more.

Mr. McNaughton watched the swiftly rushing waters for a few moments and then hurried to this side of the river and gave the alarm. Then began a search to reveal the identity of the men who had passed over the falls. Mr. McNaughton could not tell how many persons were in the boat nor was he near enough to obtain a description of them.

Within a few moments after the accident crowds of people had assembled at Prospect Point and were scanning the lower river to find some trace of the bodies and boat.

Caught on the Rocks.

About six o'clock the wreck of the boat was discovered sticking on the rocks at the head of Cedar Island, which is one of the Dufferin group. With the aid of a glass it could be seen that the boat was stove in at the stern. "No. 3" was pinned on the boat in large characters, but there was no name which might lead to identification. All sorts of rumors soon gained ground as to who the unfortunate men were, but investigation showed them to be wrong.

Clue to Their Identity.

A close watch was kept on the lower river by the crew of the Maid of the Mist, and late in the evening their watchfulness was rewarded. An oar was picked up and on it were the initials "M. & P." Someone recognized them as the initials of Mang & Perry, boatmen at La Salle, and the clue was followed with the result that the identity of the occupants of the boat was discovered.

It was learned that a party of campers located just above La Salle had rented a boat during the afternoon from Mang & Perry and had not yet been returned. The camp was sought out and there it was learned beyond a doubt who it was had taken the awful plunge to eternity.

Fellow Campers Were Asleep.

Weber, Bush and Glasner had gone out fishing in the afternoon and their companions had heard nothing of them since. The remaining six in camp were asleep when the news of the disaster came and it was a great shock to them. They had been uneasy over the prolonged absence of their comrades, but none of them imagined that anything had gone wrong with the missing ones. Camp was immediately broken upon the arrival of the sad tidings, and what was intended for an outing of pleasure ended under the saddest of circumstances.

Weber resided in Buffalo and leaves a wife and two children. One of the children, a boy, was in camp with the father. The wife and the other child are in Buffalo. Bush and Glasner were clerks in the employ of the United States Express Company in Chicago. Glasner was the sole support of a widowed mother.

PUT UP GIRL'S RING TO PAY FOR BUGGY

JANESVILLE YOUTH IS IN A SAD PLIGHT.

Drove a Horse Nearly to Death Showing Six Friends the City By Gaslight and When He Got In At Dawn the Liveryman Was Waiting For Him

It is pretty hard when a young man has to give up his best girl's diamond ring as well as his own jewelry to settle for a livery rig. That was what happened to a Janesville youth at daybreak this morning. He and six companions had made the night hideous with their yells, drove about the outskirts of the town in a two seat surrey hired from Liveryman Dan Ennis. With the aid of a keg of beer and eight packages of cigarettes they brought themselves to a pitch where the only thing that expressed their sentiments was the song, "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Rig Badly Battered

When Liveryman Ennis found his horse all but dead from over-driving, the axles on the surrey sprung and the rig badly damaged, he made up his mind that the song was true. There couldn't have been as hot a time in the old town, however, as the young man who drove the rig to the barn experienced in the next few minutes. He had sauntered into the barn about 8 o'clock last evening, cigarette in hand, and explained that he wanted a two seat rig to take two friends around town a little. At an early hour this morning Chief Hogan noticed the outfit with seven occupants going at good rate of speed towards the first ward, so the young man's friends must have increased in number as his wealth became manifest.

Stayed Out All Night.

At daybreak the horse lumbered up to the stable door half dead from being overdriven, while the sole occupant of the rig was the drunken youth who was braced against a half emptied keg of beer.

"They might have all sung 'Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight,'" said Mr. Ennis today, "but you can bet there wasn't any hotter time to be had in any town than that crowd would have had if I could have reached them."

Paid With Ring and Stud.

The young man was bundled out of the surrey and propped up against a wall while Memorial Day addresses were delivered. He was shown the condition of the rig and became very penitent. He was out of money but produced his girl's ring—turquoise set with diamonds—and offered that to settle the damage. Finally he was allowed to go, leaving the girl's ring, his own stud and the beer. It is said that if the horse shows signs of permanent injury arrests will follow.

The funeral of W. G. Wheelock will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Park Place residence. Rev. Robt. O. Denison will officiate and the interment will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

Friends wishing to view the remains may do so tomorrow between the hours of 11 and 12.

Mrs. W. G. Wheelock, Frank W. Wheelock and Mr. and Mrs. Frank and Arthur Wheelock all arrived in the city yesterday afternoon, having taken the first train for Janesville after the receipt of telegrams announcing their father's death.

WARD CASE GOES HIGHER

An Appeal Likely to Be Taken to the Supreme Court

Lawrence Ward, who sued the St. Paul road for $10,000 because of a crushed foot, and was given $500 on the second trial, may take his case to the supreme court. The motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Bennett today but a stay of proceedings for sixty days was granted.

The report submitted in the case of Edward F. Goff vs. C. B. Salmon was ratified and confirmed. The parties in this case reside in Beloit.

HAMMAS' CASE PUT OVER

Alleged Horse Thief Asks For a Continuance Until September 2.

Henry Hammas, the alleged horse thief, will remain in the county jail until September 2. At 10 o'clock this morning in charge of Sheriff Acheson the prisoner made his appearance in the municipal court when his attorney, Charles E. Pierce asked for a continuance of the case. A continuance until September 2, at 9 a. m. was granted. In default of the necessary $800 bail the prisoner was remanded to jail.

WALK AS WELL AS WRESTLE.

Brewer and Pratt Come Down From Evansville In 3:38.

Chester Brewer of this city and Paul Pratt of White Water are not only a pair of good wrestlers but they are the champion amateur walkers as well. They walked from Evansville to this city—a distance of 18 miles—in three hours and thirty-eight minutes. They followed the railroad track and incidentally took the time to count the ties.

WORKMEN HELP THE MINERS

Beloit Factory Forces Contribute Two Hours' Pay to the Fund

Beloit, Wis., Aug. 26.—[Special]—Michael Stanton, secretary of the relief for the Spring Valley miners, writes an acknowledgment of the receipt of $15 which was paid Messrs. Evans and Muir towards defraying their expenses while in Beloit, and that any clothing that can be sent them at Spring Valley will be duly appreciated. They have a capable committee of women to distribute articles and the need is very great. The various committees in this city who have the relief fund in charge have succeeded in getting a very good start in the matter. The mayor, Mr. Hardy, who was the person given the authority to forward subscriptions, has received the sum of $103.28 from the Fairbanks Morse & Co. men, many of whom notified the cashier of the works to set aside two hours' pay for the cause.

The workmen of the Berlin machine works have directed that the price of two hours' pay be taken from their wages and forwarded to the Miner's Association. This will be another good contribution to the fund. The other shops will soon make their returns as workmen are keenly interested in the cause of the miners.

NEW DEPOT MUCH NEEDED

Janesville Will Regret It If the C. & N. W. Does Not Build.

There will be much wailing in Janesville if the depot project falls through. Representatives of the C. & N. W. road point out that it will be impossible to put up a new depot of suitable proportions unless Wall street is closed, as no other location would be as convenient for the people of the city, and any other location would involve the tearing up of much track. The company representatives have been surprised at the opposition developed during the last day or two and think of sending up some painters to go over the old depot, not trying to do anything more until sentiment has changed.

BOOTBLACK'S UNION OUSTED

Youthful Members Dropped Things on the Heads of Pedestrians.

Serious trouble has befallen the Bootblack's Union. The union rented a room on the third floor of the Lappin block to be used as headquarters, but the members got into the habit of amusing themselves by dropping things on pedestrians. This was more than Ed. F. Carpenter could stand and he evicted his tenants so forcibly that the union is on the verge of a collapse.

TOO MANY DOGS IN TOWN

A Friend of the Canine Race is Moved to Protest.

There has been several complaints lately as to the number of disreputable curs running at large in the city.

Two persons have been bitten lately one a young lady and the other a boy. The city reads all the money it can raise now, why not raise some of this money by a dog tax? This city is the only city of any importance where the dog tax and other laws concerning dogs are not properly enforced.

JAW SNAPPED OUT WHILE HE YAWNED

F. L. CARVER VICTIM OF A STRANGE ACCIDENT.

An Hour and a Half of Work Fails to Reduce His Dislocated Jaw and a Fifteen Mile Ride is Taken With His Head Tied Up in Bandages.

L. P. Carver was brought fifteen miles from near Clinton this morning with his jaw dislocated. When he got up this morning and while yawning he opened his mouth so far that the jaw became displaced and could not be reduced.

Before bringing him to Janesville efforts were made for an hour and a half without success to replace the bone in its socket. Dr. James Mills placed him under chloroform and assisted by Dr. Field succeeded in reducing the dislocation after hard work. The task was made especially difficult by the fact that Mr. Carver is a large strong man, weighing over 200 pounds and did not take the anaesthetic well.

Each Jolt Was Torture.

Mr. Carver suffered great pain while on his way up from Clinton. Every jolt of the wagon sent a dart of agony through the nerves of his face. His jaw was closely bound up with an abundance of wrappings but this hardly alleviated the pain. When in the doctor's hands Mr. Carver presented a difficult problem. As said before he is a man of powerful physique and each time attempts were made to manipulate his jaw he struggled desperately. No sling could be used to render the operation easier and the doctors were forced to rely upon massage of the muscles of the jaw, which finally relaxed them enough so that the joint slipped back into place with a crack.

GLAD TO GIVE RACE PRIZES

Merchants Volunteer Assistance to Managers of Race Meeting

A committee having in charge the bicycle races to be held here next Thursday made a canvass of the stores last evening and out of ten places visited only one merchant refused to contribute, and he did so on the grounds that his wife rode a wheel against his will. The willingness of merchants to give $10 prizes makes it evident that they want a race meet.

CHAPTER I.—Fifteen years before the opening of the story John Lewis went to live in a place called Lee, in New Hampshire, with a little girl six years old, Virginia, the daughter of his deceased sister. He had a son who had been left at school, but ran away and shipped for China. Five years after Lewis went to Lee a family named Marvel also settled there. Young Walter Marvel met a girl named Virginia Lewis. Alice Marvel, Walter's sister, and Harry Lucas also met and were reported to be in love with each other. At the opening of the story a person purporting to be the missing son of John Lewis arrives at Lee. Walter Marvel proposes for Virginia's hand to her uncle, who refuses telling him that his uncle, whose name he bears, was a villain and a convict. Young Marvel draws a pistol and shoots at Lewis, but his aim is diverted by Virginia. Soon after Lewis is found dead in his room with two bullet holes in his body. His death occurs simultaneously with the arrival of the man who claims to be his son. II.—Mr. Barnes, the celebrated detective, and Tom Burrows, another detective, take up the case, strongly suspecting Virginia as the criminal. III.—They examine the grounds about the house where the murder is committed and find footprints of a man and a woman, the woman's footprints strengthening their suspicions of Virginia. They also find two pistols, one marked "Virginia Lewis," the other marked "Alice Marvel." Virginia writes a letter and goes away with it. Barnes disguised follows her. IV.—Virginia gives her letter to one Will Keverly, who posts it. Barnes keeps his eye on it, gets possession of it and thus learns the whereabouts of Walter Marvel. V.—Virginia visits Alice Marvel, who betrays a knowledge of the murder. VI.—John Lewis, the supposed son of the murdered man, produces envelopes addressed to him to prove his identity. He escapes from the room at midnight. VII.—VIII.—IX.—Barnes arrives at Lee with a man named Marvel, and an inquest is held, at which Alice Marvel testifies that she fired one of the shots that killed Lewis, and Virginia testifies that she murdered her uncle, presumably to shield the real murderer. XI, XII, XIII, XIV, and XV.—Virginia is released and Walter Marvel is arrested. Barnes promises Virginia to try clear her lover and sets about doing it.

CHAPTER XIII. THE STATION AGENT'S CLEW.

Tom Burrows had naturally taken no active part in the coroner's inquest. He was but an assistant to Mr. Barnes, and consequently bound to remain quiet, lest, by intruding, he should interfere with the older detective's plans, for, while the district attorney ostensibly conducted the examination of the witnesses, Burrows very well understood that he was but following the suggestions of Mr. Barnes.

When Marvel was testifying, however, he could not resist the desire to have him interrogated as to whether he had worn a disguise, and so had sent up his written suggestion. When Mr. Tupper brought out the admission that a disguise practically similar to the one described by the station agent had been used by Marvel, Burrows decided that there was no doubt as to the identity of his man. He more than ever determined to follow up this clew alone.

To do this he knew that he must be cautious. He was too well acquainted with the sagacity of Mr. Barnes not to realize the fact that he must have aroused suspicion by his action in sending his question to the district attorney. He consequently decided to avoid Mr. Barnes at the conclusion of the inquest, and so escape a catechizing. In this the sensational close of the proceedings assisted him, so that it was not difficult to slip away unobserved. Thus, when Mr. Barnes looked for him, he was already on his way to Lee Depot, bent upon taking the same train which had carried the mysterious stranger away from Lee on the night of the murder. Reaching the station, he found Mr. Skene, and without preamble he approached his subject.

"Do you remember, Mr. Skene," said he, "that you gave me a hint as to the identity of the man who killed Mr. Lewis?"

"Do I remember?" ejaculated Mr. Skene in an angry tone. "Do I remember? Well, darn me if you ain't the cheekiest critter I've seen meandering down that road."

"Why, what is the matter?" asked Burrows, taken aback.

"Matter? Matter enough. Look a-here, you got darned cecijot. Why ain't you done nothing? Why didn't you call me on the stan? Why didn't you stop 'em?" Burrows endeavored to answer, but Mr. Skene waved his hand as a sign to him to be silent and continued more excitedly: "Didn't you git the straight tip from me in this here business?"

"I ain't a man to git another into trouble."

"Didn't I tell you who killed Lewis? Didn't I tell you I seen him with my own eyes? Didn't I tell you I seen him twice? Didn't I tell you what train he come on an what train he went away on? How much more do you want, you blunderin' lunk? Mus' I leave my station an ketch the man myself? I reckon that's what you're waitin' on. You want me to ketch him an put him in your han's all tied, so he couldn't hurt you, hay?" Mr. Skene stopped to breathe. It is doubtful whether he would have ceased talking except from this necessity. Burrows saw his chance and tried to speak before the irate old man could resume. But he was not allowed to say much.

"It is all right, Mr. Skene," he began. "There is time enough."

"Time enough?" interrupted Mr. Skene. "Why, darn your hide, ain't the hull thing ended? Ain't you been an' loved them lunatics to tack the crime on to the fines' woman in this state? Ain't Virgie brought in guilty of killin' her uncle?"

"Certainly not," said Burrows, hoping at length to have an opportunity to speak, but again he was interrupted.

"D'you mean to tell me they ain't brought her in guilty? Ain't Jeff Harrison jest druv by an tole me the verdict?"

"But, Mr. Skene, that is only the verdict of the coroner's jury. This is not a regular trial."

"Don't you s'pose I know that? I ain't a got darned fool of I ain't never been to Borton. But what's the difference, I'd like to know? She's disgraced, an the hull county'll be talkin' 'bout her. You can't hinder folks from talkin', kin you? Well, then." This last ejaculation presumably meant that an unassailable argument had been launched, and he could afford to let his antagonist speak.

"Of course you believe her innocent?" ventured Burrows, and in a moment Mr. Skene was as excited as ever.

"B'lieve she's innocent? Do I b'lieve it? Say, look a-here! Ef all them white angels that went up an down Jacob's ladder, as they tell on in the Bible, wuz to let down a rope ladder right here on this spot, an as they come down they wuz to kneel before me an swear they seen her do it, it wouldn't budge me a mite. I'd b'lieve they wuz mistaken in the party. Man, I don't b'lieve Virgie's innocent. I jest know it, plain an simple." This old man's trust in Virginia was impressive. Faith such as this might weigh with a jury against a multiplicity of facts.

"But how can you know it? You may think so, but how can you know that she is innocent?"

"How do I know it?" Mr. Skene said this with a sneer, and paused a moment. "How do I know it? How do I know you're a lunk? I don't know how, but I know it!" With this sally he turned on his heel and walked toward the baggage room. Burrows thought he knew how to bring him back.

"Mr. Skene, you misunderstand me. I believe Miss Lewis is innocent also. Won't you help me to prove it?"

The old man turned instantly and came back. He looked sharply at Burrows a moment and said:

"Say, don't come none of your Borton tricks on me! They won't work, an ef I ketch you lyin' I'll maul you, so help me!"

"There will be no need. I will explain. I am not the only detective working on this case. It was not my fault that Miss Lewis was accused by the verdict." Burrows here adroitly left it to be inferred that it was the fault of Mr. Barnes. It was not a nice thing to do, but he was anxious to divert this man's anger from himself, that he might use him to further his ambition. In this he succeeded, too, for the station agent listened to him patiently for the first time since the beginning of the interview. Burrows continued, following up the good impression: "I asked you to keep your information secret because I wished to follow it up personally. This is the first chance that I have had to do so, and I have come to you for assistance. If you give it to me, I think there is no doubt that I can apprehend your man. In that case, of course, Miss Lewis will be released. May I count upon you?"

"Kin you count on me? Say, mebbe I wuz hasty! I ain't overpatient, I'll 'low, but I wuz riled when I hearn 'bout that verdict. But no man ain't quicker'n me to 'low he's wrong, so there's my han." Burrows shook the proffered hand gladly, delighted to have conciliated the old man. "Now, then," continued Mr. Skene, "tell me what I kin do an I'll do it quicker'n a wink."

"Listen! You told me that this man did not buy a ticket from you when he left. Therefore he must have obtained one from the conductor on the train. That will be enough to have impressed the circumstance on his mind. If not, the ticket itself can be found, and that will tell us where he left the train. What I want you to do is to introduce me to the conductor when the train comes in and arrange it so that he will not hesitate to tell me all that he may know as we go along, for I mean to take that train tonight."

"That'll be simple enough, for Berry, the conductor, is a nice feller. He'll do all he kin to help you."

"Very good. What time did you say that train leaves?"

"Ten thirty-nine."

Prompt to the minute the train which he was so anxiously awaiting came along and was stopped by the agent's flag. Mr. Skene found the conductor and introduced Burrows to him, at the same time giving a hint of what was wanted. As soon as they had started the two dropped into conversation, for there had been no other passengers to take up, and therefore there were no tickets to be collected.

"Mr. Berry," said Burrows, "to make no mystery about what I want, I will say at once that I am a detective and am looking for a particular man. One answering his description boarded this train last Sunday night. I desire you to tell me where he was going."

"I should like nothing better than to oblige you, Mr. Burrows; but, really, we see so many passengers that it is not an easy matter to know all about where they get on or off, especially after the lapse of several days."

"Of course not, but consider for a moment. It cannot be a common thing to get a passenger at this hour at so small a place as Lee."

"No; you are right about that. Nevertheless I get them all along my route, and there are many stops as unimportant as this one."

"I see I must assist your memory. This man did not buy a ticket from the agent at the station, and consequently he must have done so on the train. Can you not recall that circumstance?"

"Y-e-s—y-e-s—it seems to me that I do. Ah, I have it! The man you want had a full beard and wore a long overcoat. He also had a large satchel, and I remember that he would not let me send it to the baggage room. But where did he want a ticket for? That I don't get somehow."

"Haven't you the ticket which you sold him?" asked Burrows anxiously.

"No. We turn our tickets in at the end of each trip. Of course they would have it at the main office. But stop a minute. Perhaps I have the stub." Burrows watched him as patiently as possible while he looked through his book, turning to the right date and glancing over the stubs of the tickets which he had sold on the train. This occupied a few minutes only, at the end of which the conductor continued:

"I am sorry, but it is not here. You see, I use that book when I sell a ticket for any distance, and as there is no stub for anything from Lee it must be that your man only made a short ride. The farmers along the line often do that, and we let them simply pay the agent where they stop off, the agent giving us the ticket."

"Could you tell, then, where this man got off?"

"I cannot be sure about it. He must have left the train either at Epping, the next stop, or one station beyond that, for we seldom let a man ride farther in the way that I have described. But stop here a minute and I will ask my brakeman if he knows."

The conductor was gone but a few moments and returned with disappointment on his face.

"No. He knows nothing; doesn't remember the man at all. But see here! The thing is simple enough! All we must do is to ask the agent at Epping, and if not there it must have been at the next."

Epping, a much larger town than Lee, is but five miles from that place, and therefore it was not long before they reached the station. Immediately Burrows and the conductor leaped from the train and went up to the station agent, who was delivering the mail bags. It took but a moment to explain what was wanted and at once the agent replied:

"Oh, yes, I remember the man well enough. He paid me for his ticket. I hope there's nothing wrong."

"This gentleman will tell you," replied the conductor in a hurry, because he could not keep his train waiting. Then turning to Burrows he continued:

"Mr. Burrows, let me introduce you to Mr. Jennings. He will give you the information which you want. Good night! I wish you luck!" A moment later he and his train were lost to view around a curve, though a deep rumbling noise remained on the air for many minutes. Burrows turned to the man beside him and said:

"I am glad to meet you, Mr. Jennings, and I hope that you may be able to lend me some assistance in the matter which I am investigating."

"I am at your service, sir. If you'll tell me what I can do for you, I'll be only too happy," replied the agent politely.

"I am a detective and am after a man. I don't say the one who came here on Sunday is he, but I think so, from the mysterious way in which he acted at Lee. If you can tell me anything about him, you will earn my gratitude."

"Well, I don't know as I can help you much. I remember the fellow, partly 'cause he stopped off from such a late train and partly 'cause he had no ticket and so had to buy one when he reached here, but I am afraid there ain't much more I can tell you."

"Didn't he ask you any questions—where he could find a place to sleep at so late an hour or anything of that kind?"

"Not a word. He just took his satchel and marched off as if he knew all about the place he meant to stop at."

"You say he took his satchel with him?"

"Stop a minute. That gives me an idea. You want to find where he put up; ain't that the point?"

"That is precisely what I am after."

"Very good! As I said, he asked no questions, but marched off. That's what he did do, but your question about the satchel reminds me. It seemed so large that his going off on foot with it in his hand attracted some attention, and as one of the neighbors noticed that he started off in his own direction he jumped into his wagon, and as he drove off he said to me, 'I guess I'll give the stranger a lift with his bag.'"

"Do you know whether the man accepted his offer or not?"

"Oh, yes; he had not turned the corner there when Weston caught up with him, and I saw him climb into the wagon."

"Who is this Weston? Where can I find him?"

"I should say he's the very man you want for more reasons than one. Not only he can tell you where he dropped his company Sunday night, but as he keeps the hotel there he can put you up for the night."

With a few necessary directions as to how to find the hotel kept by this man Weston, Burrows started toward that place. The hotel in question would scarcely be granted so high sounding a name in a city, but as it was the largest hostelry in the place perhaps it was well enough so to designate it. The young detective reached it without any difficulty and as easily found the proprietor. After engaging a room for the night he at once approached the main object of his visit.

"Mr. Weston," said he, "I have been informed that you picked up a stranger at the depot last Sunday night and gave him a lift in your wagon."

"Yes, that's true enough."

"I would be much obliged to you if you will tell me where you put him down."

"Well, look here! What might be your reasons for asking about him? I ain't a man to git another into trouble, an excuse me, but you're a stranger to me."

"Well, was not the other man a stranger also?"

"Yes, but for all that I won't do nothing to git him into any scrape." He looked in a decidedly suspicious manner at the detective. Burrows considered for a moment, and from the manner of his host he almost thought that, despite his assertion that the man was unknown to him, he had recognized him. He also decided that it would not be wise to reveal his real object in hunting up this man. He determined upon a bold stroke.

"Mr. Weston," said he, "I am glad that the secret of my friend is in such safe hands. I thank you for your discretion. Can we finish this conversation where we will not be overheard?"

Weston seemed puzzled, but led the way into a small room at the back of the building.

"Now, then," resumed Burrows, "I must see my friend at once, and since you seem to be his friend also I shall count on your assistance."

"You shall have it, but first you must prove you're his friend."

Burrows now felt certain that he was right in his conjecture—that the hotel proprietor had recognized his companion.

The next question was whether he himself had guessed the man's identity. He continued:

"I suppose you know that our friend has been hiding from the authorities for some time?"

Weston nodded.

"I am a friend of his and a lawyer, and he wrote to me asking that I should come on here and look after his interests. I started at once, but when I reached the place where he asked me to meet him he had left there. I have followed him to this town, but as I am a stranger I have no idea where he would be likely to stop. I heard at the depot that you had taken him up, and so came straight to you."

"If our friend wanted to see you, how is it he didn't leave his address for you?"

Burrows was compelled to think quickly here, but he was equal to the emergency.

"That is what puzzled me at first, but then it occurred to me that he could not do so without risking some detective's finding it out also."

"Well, look here, I must be sure you're talkin' straight, so jest tell me the name of the man? We might be talkin' about different parties, after all."

This was a trying moment to Burrows. He had hoped, by prolonging the conversation, to surprise Weston into an accidental mention of the name. Now that the question was put he was compelled to give the name which he suspected to be the right one.

"I am endeavoring to meet my friend Walter Marvel."

Burrows could almost hear his heart beat as he watched the face of his host, but Weston gave no sign and remained silent for a few minutes.

"Well, I guess it's all right. Mr. Marvel was here Sunday night."

Burrows felt a shiver pass over him, he was so relieved at this reply. Restraining himself as much as possible in his endeavor not to seem too elated, he continued:

"You say he was here? Did he stop overnight in your house?"

"No; he only came in for a minute; then he went on to his own place."

Burrows at once thought of the evidence given by young Harrison, which this statement corroborated.

"You mean the place where he goes to put up when he is out shooting, do you not?"

This acquaintance with Marvel's habits evidently disarmed Weston of any lingering doubts as to the intentions of the detective, for he replied in a much more friendly tone:

"Yes, that's where he went. Whether he's still there or not I can't say, for I haven't seen him since that night."

"I suppose you can direct me how to find it in the morning?"

"Oh, yes; but if you want to ketch him at home you'd better start early. I guess he's off with his gun most of the day."

"I shall act on your advice. I suppose that you have known Marvel a long time, since you are so friendly."

"Why, no; not exactly. You see, it ain't any special friendship I have for Marvel that made me so careful. In fact, I don't know much about him at all. I haven't seen him more'n once or twice altogether."

"But I thought you were his friend."

"I'm any man's friend when he's down. I heard all about the trouble he had with Lewis, and as I didn't see as how he'd done any different to what I would myself I wouldn't be the one to help to ketch him."

"But if you don't know Marvel how can you be sure that he was the man whom you picked up Sunday night?" Burrows was beginning to fear some mistake. However, he was reassured by the positive reply of his host.

"Oh, there ain't any chance of a mistake."

Gas Stove Philosophy

MATCHES CHEAPER THAN GAS.

Light a burner only when you are ready to use it and turn it off the instant you are done with it. This is the real secret of small gas bills. When a top burner is first lighted the fire is then as hot as though it had been lighted an hour. Take instant advantage of this and lower flame after a thing has once started to cook. Gas is the most economical fuel when ordinary care is taken. Gas Stoves can be used as well in cool weather as in the heat of season; their great convenience is the same at all times. The Gas Stove is a complete stove for all kinds of cooking. The even heat of the Gas Stove brings better cooking results than that of other stoves. As an emergency stove the Gas Stove has no equal. It pays for itself on occasions of great hurry. The draught of the Gas Stove is always the same—because it requires no draught. The wind may shift or the chimney become clogged, but the Gas stove does its work just the same. The Gas Stove lengthens one's life and the overworked housewife can truly appreciate the leisure hours gained through its use.

take! I suspected who 'twas, by the way he was all muffled up and because he went off lugging a big bag without saying a word to any one at the station. So I just called him by name, and he owned up, but he begged me not to tell any one of his being in town, and I haven't."

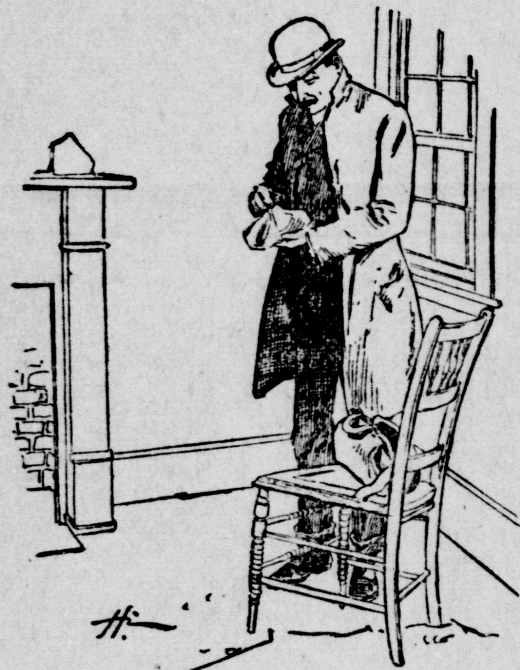

"I believe you, Mr. Weston, and I thank you for your discretion. Now, if you will show me to my room, I'll thank you and ask you to call me about 6 o'clock."

Burrows was well pleased with himself and with the progress which he had made so far in the investigation of his clew. He thought that he had managed Weston with considerable adroitness. All that he had hoped when he had started was to find some clew to prove Marvel's identity with the late visitor at Riverside. He had succeeded beyond his hopes, for here was a witness, however unwilling, who could be made to testify that in the stranger and despite his disguise he had been able to recognize Marvel himself. Moreover, he now felt satisfied that Marvel had lied when he said that he had thrown his disguise into the river, and he even hoped to find some trace of it at the old house.

Promptly at 6 Burrows was called, and in a very little time he was ready to start. Weston gave him full directions as to how to find Marvel's house.

After walking about a mile beyond the more populous portion of the town Burrows reached his destination, which he readily recognized from Weston's description. The house itself could barely be seen from the road. It was in the midst of a number of large trees, and besides, no care had been given to the place in years, it was surrounded by dense shrubbery and covered with vines. Thus, everything about it being green, it would scarcely have attracted the attention of a casual observer. Burrows thought it a very good retreat for a man anxious to avoid the scrutiny of his fellows and entered more than ever satisfied that some important developments awaited his examination of the interior.

Pushing open the door, which moved noiselessly on its hinges, despite the dilapidation everywhere apparent, he found himself in a small but well lighted room. In this, which had been originally a kitchen, there was some slight evidence of civilized habitation. The stove bore no signs of rust, and the ashes of a recent fire attested the fact that the owner used it, perhaps for cooking, as a kettle, partly filled, still rested in one of the holes. Burrows observed this at a glance, but the dust apparent in all other parts of the room satisfied him that, except for making a cup of coffee or other light cooking, the apartment had been abandoned. He thought that he must look further for the room in which he hoped to find some evidence.

He passed through a door and found himself in the dining room, as a table and cupboards proved. A casual peep into the latter showed a small store of canned meats and fruits, biscuits, butter, sugar and the like. The next apartment was the sitting room, but the dust and dirt everywhere bespoke an absence of all care on the part of the occupant. Ascending one flight, he explored two rooms in a similar condition of neglect before he reached one in which there were any signs of habitation. This was plainly if not rudely furnished and contained nothing but what was absolutely necessary in a sleeping room. A cot bed, a metal washbowl and a pitcher on a painted wooden stand; a looking glass without a frame, tacked to the wall; an old dressing case with the top, which originally held a glass, entirely missing; a few chairs, and the inventory is complete. It was evident that the house was used, as has been stated, only as an occasional sleeping place. The few odds and ends had been gathered from the general wreck and put in this room, in the endeavor to make it at least habitable. Any further trouble or expense had been considered unnecessary. There was a commodious closet, which had probably decided the selection of the room, for it was filled with a miscellaneous collection of articles, arranged with evident care and neatness, comprising outfits for gunning, fishing, etc.

Burrows glanced about for the clew for which he was searching. The first point to determine was, had the man hidden his disguise in this place? To learn this he did not go searching blindly about the place, but adopted methods which he had seen used by Mr. Barnes on similar occasions. Although he was jealous of Mr. Barnes, he admired his ability and did not hesitate to imitate him. He dropped into a chair and glanced around, looking about him keenly, while he endeavored to discover what he wished by reasoning it out, rather than by chance. Mr. Barnes would say, "Undoubtedly chance is a great factor in all investigations, but the man who uses his brains will have more of these 'lucky accidents' than he who waits for things to 'turn up.' Burrows felt the truth of this and acted accordingly. At this moment he wished to know what had been done with the disguise and reasoned as follows:

"Marvel crossed the river; therefore the things were wet. He says he changed them at his house and threw the bundle into the river. Did he make the change, and, if so, did he throw the things into the river? He had a satchel, and it is probable that it contained the clothes. If so, he made the change, but did not throw them into the river. According to Weston, he took the satchel with him when he started for this house. As this is his sleeping room, he probably brought it in here, whatever he may have done later. Although cleaner than the rest of the house, there is still a considerable quantity of dust about this room; yet it is not likely that I can find out, from such a source, where he laid down his satchel. However, if he took out the wet clothes and laid them down, the water would have converted the dust into mud and would have left a distinct mark on the floor. There is nothing of the kind about, so he did not put them on the floor. What did he do with them? What would I do under similar circumstances? Burn them perhaps. But they were saturated with water. Still it is always dangerous to conceal such evidence, for some one generally finds the best hidden articles when a crime is connected with them. Therefore I should have burned them at all cost of time or trouble. I should have burned the satchel with them, building a large log fire and putting it with its contents on top of the logs. In this way, by the time the fire had destroyed the satchel, the clothes would be dry enough to burn. Then I should have raked out and thrown away the ashes, a point which would not strike a criminal as quickly as a detective—at least, it seems that it seldom does. I think I may as well examine the fireplace."

Reaching this point in his reasoning, he went to the chimney and found some ashes. He carefully brushed the pile on to a piece of newspaper, which he took from his overcoat pocket. This done, he laid the whole on the floor near the window, and then, with a piece of stick, gradually moved the soft ashes from the center to the side. As he did this he was careful to examine every particle, searching for anything that may have escaped combustion. It was not long before his patience was rewarded, for first a few iron buttons and then several other pieces of iron or metal of some kind were separated from the debris. The buttons, of course, proved that something more than an ordinary fire had been made on the hearth, and it was but fair to suppose that clothing had been burned. The other things, however, puzzled him awhile, for, though not entirely destroyed, he still found it hard to tell exactly what they were. After some thought he concluded that the majority of the metal had originally belonged to the framework of the satchel. One piece still remained to be accounted for. This was a bit of wire. Burrows was almost on the point of throwing this away, as unimportant, when it suddenly occurred to him that it must be all that was left of the false whiskers. There was nothing more that he could make out of the ashes; still he carefully wrapped all up and placed the package in a small satchel, which he had brought with him. Burrows smiled as he thought to himself: "Marvel lied when he said the locket was still in his pocket. There is no trace of it here, so it is evident that the one found was the same which he had with him that night."

Burrows was now anxious to find the pistol. He recollected that the squire had told of the pistol which Marvel had left at the house, and as he knew that it had not been found he deemed it probable that it was the weapon used in the murder. This was not so readily reasoned out as the other matter, for, as a pistol could not be burned, it must be hidden, and as there was no way of guessing the hiding place there was but one course open to him—namely, to hunt. This he did as thoroughly as Mr. Barnes had taught him to do, and when he went down stairs again he felt almost sure that the weapon had not been concealed above. He was just as thorough in going over the rooms on the lower floor and finally reached the kitchen without having found it. He had not looked long in this place, however, before he noticed that the tiles in front of the stove had been disturbed. One of the stones had been so poorly replaced that Burrows muttered to himself, "He must have wanted this to be found." Removing it, he disclosed a hole below, in which was a pistol. He took this out, and another object attracted his attention. This proved to be a small piece of silver plated metal, and a closer scrutiny revealed the fact that a name was engraved thereon. This name was "John Lewis."

"Better and better," thought the detective. "How nicely the precautions of a criminal, as usual, serve to convict him. This is a plate which he wrangled from the satchel, and the name proves that he got that at the farm. I am not surprised any longer that he did not disturb any of his own people that night, for he did not go home at all. He obtained a change at the house of his victim. He is a cool hand, to kill a man and then wear his clothing away from the scene of his crime."

Burrows now turned his attention to the pistol, and at once noticed that there were three empty chambers. He concluded from this that Marvel must have fired both shots found in the body. Still looking at the weapon, he noticed that a name was engraved on the stock. He approached the window for more light and read, "Walter Marvel." At this moment the door was opened and Mr. Barnes and Lewis stood on the threshold.

THREE HUNDRED POUNDS OF FRESH PIKE, BASS AND PICKEREL FOR FRIDAY.

TWO OF A KIND.

But the Dry Goods Salesman Objected to Fellowship with the Puller-In.

A smart-looking and well-dressed gentleman lounged in the elevator entrance of a Broadway wholesale dry goods warehouse. Apparently his sole occupation was watching the faces of passers-by. Now and then he would make a feint at starting for some passing figure, and then generally resumed his listless attitude against the door-jamb. At last he did make a frantic dive for a stout gentleman who was passing. Unfortunately a crowd of pedestrians obstructed his purpose and before he could clutch the arm of the stout gentleman, who was a buyer for a well-known retail store, another smart-looking, well-dressed gentleman, who had been lounging at the elevator entrance of another wholesale dry goods warehouse, darted out, seized the stout gentleman by the hand and had him in the elevator in a moment. That same afternoon the first mentioned of the two smart-looking, well-dressed gentlemen was walking from Worth street to the bridge on Park row and had nearly reached Baxter street when a tough young man seized him by the arm.

"Say, boss, can't I sell you a first-class spring overcoat? Our goods is de best on de row, an' we'll make the price to fit yer pocket. See? Come in an' let me—"

He tugged vigorously as he said this, and the gentleman was growing red in the face.

"Let go my coat, you blackguard, or I'll have you arrested," he shouted, struggling to shake off the other's clutch.

"Oh, no, you won't. We're in de same biz. See? Jes come in an' look over our goods. I'm sure we can suit yer."

With a violent wrench the gentleman shook himself free and turned indignantly on the puller-in:

"If I could see a police officer I'd have you arrested, you—"

Then words failed.

"No yer wouldn't. Yer not'n better'n a puller-in yerself. I've seen yer on Broadway layin' fur people an' yankin' 'em in jes es we do. Yer jes a puller-in same as I am, but y' ain't got no pride nor sympat'y in de biz. See?"

And the smart-looking, well-dressed gentleman hurried off without saying yea or nay or uttering a protest. The canker of comparison had entered his soul.

FIFTY-SIX A DANGER POINT.

Beware How You Live to This Age If You Have Genius!

Fifty-six years seems to be a fatal age for people of genius, says the New York Times. Among those who have died at that age may be mentioned Dante, the Italian poet; Hugh Capet, king of France; Henry VIII., king of England; Henry IV., emperor of Germany; Paganini, Italian violinist; Alexander Pope, English poet; George Sala, English orientalist; Marcus Aurelius, emperor of Rome; Frederick I., king of Prussia; John Hancock, American statesman; Marie Louisa, empress of France; Philip Massenger, English dramatist; Saladin, the great sultan of Egypt; Robert Stephenson, English engineer; Scipio Africanus, Roman general; Helvitius, French philosopher and author; Henry II., the first of the Plantagenet line; the elder Pilius, Roman naturalist and author; Julius Caesar, Charles Kingsley, English author; Juan Prim, Spanish general and statesman; Henry Knox, American revolutionary general; Thomas Mifflin, American patriot; Von Tromp, Dutch admiral; Abraham Lincoln, Marryat, the novelist; George Whitefield, English founder of the Calvinistic methodism; Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, favorite of Queen Elizabeth; Johann Gaspar Spurzheim, German physician and phrenologist, and Frederick II., emperor of Germany.

For the Benefit of the Poor.

Some minstrels recently started on a tour and advertised in a town to give a performance for the "benefit of the poor. Tickets reduced to sixpence."

The hall was crammed, and the next morning a committee for the poor called upon the manager of the concern for the amount the said benefit had netted. The treasurer expressed astonishment at the demand.

"I thought," said the chairman of the committee, "you advertised this concert for the benefit of the poor!"

"Well," replied the treasurer, "didn't we reduce the tickets to sixpence so that the poor could all come?"
